FOREWORD

"Those who do not take an interest in public affairs are doomed to be ruled by evil men" - PLATO - 300 B.C.

WE PLACE IN YOUR HANDS a work of unparalleled importance, profound insight and extraordinary scholarship. P.D. Stuart writes in a clear, precise and compelling manner, penetrating to the heart of his subject.

Indeed, much care and attention has been bestowed by the author in this edition of his second 'Treatise' Anti-Christ is a Woman (being the sequel to Book 1 of Codeword Barbêlôn). In the prosecution of a purpose, which is not polemical, but factual, the author has undertaken a task not agreeable to most; but which, in keeping with his promise in Book 1, he proceeds to perform. And he does so in a calm and judicial temper, giving cogent and compelling reasons for the startling propositions he advances, so that those who may at first believe the alarm to be groundless, may nevertheless yet be convinced.

Following upon the success of his earlier work (Book 1), the author must now be given the credit as one of the most exact thinkers to have graced this generation; possessing an acuity—to a degree that is almost inconceivable in an age like our own, of loose thinking and slapdash reasoning—and the power of following through his observations and convictions to their logical conclusion.

The keenness and forcefulness of his thoughts, his clarity of expression, his genius of intellect and his trenchant criticism, one can only admire.

Amongst other subjects, the author reveals the true forces behind what has been called "the greatest recession to sweep the world and to shake up all nations"! Stuart asserts that "we are living at a time more momentous than that of the advent of Ignatius Loyola or that of Luther,"—viz., that "the scenes are shifting in the great theatre of the world and that the final act is being played out on the American stage." In so doing, he brings to the attention of his readers, once again, matters of infinite and practical importance. The issues? He says, they are visible behind the scenes to those who have eyes to see. "Change," he says, "is in the air," and the apocalyptic visions are soon "to be realised."

One of the omens of this 'apocalypse' Stuart contends is that we are facing this "great recession" that is sweeping all before it and shaking up "all nations"; and that all the desperate attempts to stem the tide, including several multi-billion dollar bail-outs have so far failed to hold back the waves of recession! So much so that Pope Benedict, on July 7, 2009, called for a new "world political authority" to manage the global economy and to regulate national economies...

But, "Is the financial meltdown mere chance: an accident or is there more to all of this than meets the eye." "Why are world events spinning out of control?" "Why do the explanations we hear from our government officials seem so unreliable?" And "Why do the establishment news media leave us feeling like we have only heard part of the story"! "Was Thomas Watson right when he warned in 1910 that the evils of the credit and paper system, must, at no distant day, lead to a monetary crisis?" Why is this all happening now?

P.D. Stuart contends that the end result of the global financial crisis will be the establishment of a One World Government that will control who “may buy or sell....” He refers to the book of Revelation as forecasting this development. And while some may yet doubt the relevance or reliability of prophetic predictions, it is an age-old human propensity to try and see into the future. This “universal desire supposes a latent belief in the human mind in the possibility of prophecy.” In fact, the greatest scientist of his generation, none less than he who propounded the theory of gravity, Sir Isaac Newton, wrote, in 1727, “About the Time of the End, a body of men will be raised up who will turn their attention to the prophecies, and insist upon their literal interpretation,” this they will do “in the midst of much clamor and opposition.”

Indeed, it is impossible to read this book without feeling that it propounds a vast amount of information which explains a great bulk of prophecy, and in a manner that is precise, convincing, and startling.

In presenting this second volume to the public, the author does so in the hope of reaching an even larger audience, and for the same reason that one would awaken a sleeping family in a burning dwelling or wave a lantern at a crowd with shouts of “danger”! at the approach of a railway train about to derail.

For as the author shows, most convincingly, the stage is now set for a gigantic, global financial system of unimaginable evil—as foretold—essentially satanic in its origin, and under the control of what in Scripture is called “ANTI-CHRIST,” or the ‘Apostasy of the latter times.’

The author does not take up the time of his readers with labored arguments but rather he gives “an array of facts as probably were never before condensed in so narrow a compass, or so well adapted to show that there are” in Anti-Christ “all sorts of bitter, poisonous ingredients and iniquity—the depths of hell itself”! This work confirms P.D. Stuart as a shrewd observer, a profound thinker, and an able writer. He traces the panorama in the minutest detail, from the main character to the common troops on the ‘battleground,’ and using vivid but varying adjectives he delivers his message with picturesque but devastating effect.

We recommend this book without hesitation, as a book for the people: “a record of facts, well-attested, burning facts, which cannot fail to convince the incredulous, arouse the indifferent and lukewarm, and inspire every lover of truth and of his country” (to quote Sparry). Indeed, we venture to say that this book will do more than that: it will send a barbed harpoon through the heart of the ‘beast,’ which we hope will inflict a “fatal wound,” never to be healed!
